FIRST came the Chevrolet Master Six—and Canada responded with the greatest welcome given a Chevrolet since 1929. Then, up stepped the leader with another entirely new line of cars, the Standard Six. Down went the Chevrolet base-price to the lowest figure in history for a full-size, six-cylinder closed car. And the spotlight of public interest flashed brighter than ever on Chevrolet.

Now—for the first time—there are two Chevrolet Sixes—the Standard and the Master. Body-styles for everybody. Prices for several different groups of buyers. But only one standard of quality—the very same high standard that has made CHEVROLET the greatest name in low-priced motoring.

Both Standard and Master lines offer Air-Streamed Bodies by Fisher—safety glass windshields—and that newest General Motors sensation: Fisher No-Draft Ventilation. In the Standard Six, you can enjoy all these advantages at the lowest operating cost of any full-size car on the road.

Whichever you choose—the mere fact that the leader built it is assurance of outstanding value. But you'll never really know how outstanding it is till you come to our showrooms—see it, drive it, yourself!

Primary Cause Of Depression.

A recent address by Professor Gilbert E. Jackson, of the Department of Economics of the University of Toronto, delivered before the Empire Club of Toronto, has attracted wide attention throughout Canada, and deservedly so. It has been quoted on the floor of Parliament, and has been made the text of countless newspaper articles. Yet it dealt with a very simple subject, a subject as old as the human race—selfishness.

Thousands of sermons have been preached on this subject, books and dramas without number have been written with selfishness as the central theme, the law courts have been filled with cases arising out of selfishness, sorrow and trouble of all kinds have sprung from it all down through the ages. Nevertheless, Professor Jackson's address commands an immediate and large audience today because it dealt with the all-prevailing world depression as having its basic cause in just this one thing selfishness. And who is there who will say he is wrong?

Professor Jackson is an economist. He deals with cold facts and still colder figures. He is concerned with the actualities of life, with things material to our human well being. But when he has analysed all the factors, and sifted all the facts, and studied all the evidence pro and con relative to this world economic depression, and the prevention of any depression in the future, trouble is, after all, not some man-made institution or system like banking or tariffs, that it is not over-production or under-production, but a condition of mind and heart of the average individual—his selfishness, avarice and greed, of which all these other things are but the natural and inevitable outcome.

So, professor Jackson stressed the point that economic betterment must come primarily from a change of heart in the individual rather than merely by ticks of economic readjustment from proposals that go deep into the heart of man and begin with his own conscience. "Looking back on the past four years I wonder," he said, "that the realization of these things has not brought forth a new religious movement."

It is not a new religious movement that is called for or necessary, but action based upon acceptance of the fundamentals of Christian religion. The Sermon on the Mount contains the whole and complete formula for the cure of the present depression, and the prevention of any depression in the future. It is not the formula of Capitalism, nor Socialism, nor Communism. It is the formula of the Golden Rule, acceptance and application of the principle of doing unto others as we would that others should do unto us.

What are these tariff barriers erected by all nations but an outward expression of the narrow nationalistic sentiments of individuals, and narrow nationalism is the outcome of the selfishness and greed of individuals. Tariffs are erected for the openly avowed purpose of selfishly promoting our own individual and national interests at the expense of loss and suffering by other individuals and nations. Selfishness and greed is the misapprehension of such actions.

And what is true of tariffs as an instrument of economic warfare between nations, applies with equal truth and force to scores of other man-devised and man-made methods, schemes and systems, conceived in selfishness, first of the individual, and through the selfishness of the community, the nation, and the world. And the selfishness and greed of the individual is merely more openly expressed and multiplied when it takes the form of the selfishness of classes, communities and nations.

At the present time it is considered the popular thing to denounce the so-called "vested interests" as the embodiment of all the selfishness and greed in the world, and to declare because one class acts from these undesirable and evil motives, other classes should unite in order to act from exactly the same motives. Two wrongs do not and never did make a right, and the swing of the pendulum from one wrong to another wrong will remedy nothing, but only provide still more trouble, further greed, a greater growth of selfishness.

Those who today control finance and industry under the prevailing system have much to account for. They have been greedy and selfish. They must and will be made to mend their ways, even if their hearts and desires remain unchanged. But the remedy must be to be exposed to that end and act to meet greed with greed, to oppose selfishness with more selfishness, to organize one set of interests to wage war on another and opposing set of interests.

All greed and selfishness does not arise from greed for wealth or property. There is the greed for position, for power, for domination, for honors, for social distinction, for something, almost anything, the other fellow has and we have not. And how few individuals striving for these things are animated solely by a desire to possess and use them unselfishly for the benefit of others?

Professor Jackson is right, unquestionably so, when he declares that economic betterment must come primarily from a change of heart in the individual, and that word "individual" is all inclusive; it means the banker, the mortgage and loan executive, the railway head, the politician, the manufacturer, the merchant, the farmer—all of these, but it also includes the clerk, the artisan, the farm hand, the laborer. Mankind is in one lifeboat in the storm of this depression. They must pull together on the oars in unison, not at cross purposes. It is a case of one for all and all for one.

To change the metaphor, this is a time for building up, not tearing down. It is a time to sink all selfishness for the common good. The man in debt must receive generous treatment and ample assistance at the hands of his creditors; equally so the creditor is entitled to and must receive proper recognition of his rights by the man who is indebted to him. The employer must make sacrifices in the interests of his employees; the employees must do likewise to help their employer.

Supplies From Britain

Imports Of New Products From the United Kingdom

Outstanding characteristic of the imports into Canada from the United Kingdom during the first nine months of the present fiscal year was the increase in many raw products that are to be finished in this country or to play some part in manufacture, said Hon. H. H. Stevens in a statement issued regarding trade with the United Kingdom.

"It is encouraging," said the minister of trade and commerce, "to note the diversity of these increasing demands for supplies from Great Britain."

In addition, all municipal unions in Canada will be asked to take similar action, as well as the Canadian Union of Municipalities.

"The prettiest
rag rugs
I ever saw"

"I feel I should share with you a wonderful compliment I had on my new rag rugs," writes an appreciative Three Rivers woman. "A wealthy lady from the City of Quebec was visiting here and saw the rag rugs I had just finished. She was so enthusiastic—said she had never seen such artistic ones, with such rich, lovely colors. She asked me if I bought new materials to get such beautiful color effects. When I told her I had dyed my old scraps with Diamond Dyes, she simply couldn't believe it. Of course I'm very proud of my rugs. Besides being beautiful colors, they are fast and washable." In the popular new art of rug making women are finding again the real value of Diamond Dyes for permanent dark colors by boiling. No other dyes make old materials look so new and rich in color, because no other dyes contain so much of the finest aniline colors. For light dainty shades without boiling for lingerie, summer blouses and dresses, use the wonderful new Diamond Tints. All drug stores have both Diamond Dyes and Diamond Tints.

Japanese Prison Official Says Worst Type Are Generally Bald

The worst type of habitual criminal is generally bald, according to Dr. Kinzo Saka, of the Fukuoka Prison, Tokio, who has just completed an extensive study of 1,521 criminals occupying 10 years. In the course of that work he found nine typical habitual criminals. They had from 16 to 29 criminal convictions, and had spent from 20 to 30 years in prison. They were all bald.

No Argument

The Court was trying a case which had arisen out of a car accident.

"You say you were half scared to death," said counsel for the defence. "I know very well I was," said the victim, with warmth.

"Then," said counsel coldly, "how do you know it was a motor car, or something resembling a motor car, that hit you?"

The victim looked square at him. "It resembled one all right," he replied. "I was forcibly struck by the resemblance."

Cannot Issue Special Coins

Government Has Refused Request By City Of Toronto

In these days of discussion regarding stamp bills, flat money and other methods of ridding Canada of its share of the depression, it is interesting to note that the issue of money in any form for special purposes is contrary to all British practice. None but the King may benefit by the issue of coinage.

Some time ago it was suggested to Ottawa that the Canadian government authorize a special issue of 50-cent pieces in order that Toronto might facilitate the financing of the 1934 centennial celebration. It was estimated that a substantial profit might be realized in selling these at a premium over the counter to souvenir hunters and coin collectors. Mayor Stewart asked, of course, for a monopoly on the sale for the city of Toronto.

However, His Majesty's government, through Ottawa, has ruled that important as the occasion may be, such a precedent cannot be established in the case of Toronto, according to a report made to the centennial committee.

France Has Largest Gun

Throws One-and-Half Ton Shell Over Eleven Miles

Just to add spice to the disarmament discussion, it is announced that France has built the largest gun in the world. It is a 52-centimeter howitzer. That is a 20.4-inch calibre and is larger than the 18-inch naval piece which was built by Britain during the war and mounted on H.M.S. Furious or mounted on Lord Clive. Britain had discussed building a gun of 20-inch calibre, but it was never manufactured.

The new howitzer of the French can throw a shell weighing 3,080 pounds a distance of 11 1/4 miles. When you think of projecting a chunk of metal weighing more than 1 1/2 tons through the air to drop on a building or some other target, the imagination is stretched to contemplate the possible damage from the explosion. The gun is carried on a railway mounting 98 feet long and weighing 265 tons.

Travellers Ask For Better Inspection Of Hotels In Saskatchewan

Pointing to the need for adequate inspection of Saskatchewan hotels to afford guests protection against fire hazards, members of the Associated Canadian Travellers at their monthly luncheon in Saskatoon recently, declared themselves unanimously in favor of government action leading to the enforcement of existing regulations providing for fire escapes. It was the opinion of speakers that travellers, who were the largest class of country hotel users, were the proper individuals to request government action. The recent Tisdale tragedy was cited to show the dangers of hotels lacking fire escape equipment.

Hikers On Maine Highways Must Face On-Coming Cars

The State of Maine is giving official recognition to the rights of the pedestrian to a limited use of its highways. That is a concession. Actually the pedestrian has the right-of-way over the cars—but the cars have the momentum. But the hikers in Maine are going to have a legislative enactment requiring pedestrians to walk on the left side of the highway. Such a walker would face oncoming cars, and be in greater safety than if on the other side. Motorists would be no less relieved from a hazard that distresses conscientious persons as they drive—Brandon Sun.

High Commissioner's Office In London Sends a Warning Note About Cattle Export Trade

Too much importance cannot be placed upon the suggestions made in the following paragraphs from a report based on a thorough investigation by the High Commissioner's office of the situation in respect to our export cattle trade. A note of warning which we cannot afford to ignore is quite apparent in these paragraphs, which should be placed before every person interested in avoiding any action which might tend to jeopardize the development of our export cattle trade in Great Britain.

"It is now generally recognized that there has been an improved selection of steers for the export trade in recent years, and this popularity here has spread considerably. Dealers and buyers are peculiarly sensitive to disappointment when the standard of excellence drops in any one shipment. The burden of returning a reasonably good price for common sorts of livestock imposes a heavy tax on salesmanship, and consignees appreciate the adverse effect on business of unfavourable price returns. Constantly they are telling the shippers what the trade wants and urging them, diplomatically, to choose export cattle carefully for type, age and conformation. But the she-cattle trade, being rather more diversified, lends itself more readily to haphazard experiences than does the trade in steers.

"Our healthy heifers and cows have been talked of and written about frequently. There has been created an atmosphere of hopeful expectancy. The value of goodwill is an additional consideration. Its place in the respective sections of the British trade ranks high, and this fact should be weighed carefully by the Canadian shippers.

"It is not possible to forecast whether or not cows and heifers, suitable for breeding and dairy purposes, can be selected and shipped to advantage. That will be determined only by trial and experience. Starving the trade demand for suitable stock is the more preferable and prudent policy; over-feeding it with common sorts, especially at the outset, will stunt, and may even damn, a promising potential trade.

"She-stock selected in Canada for breeding or dairy purposes in Great Britain, and lacking the characteristics fitting to the ideas and needs of the people specializing in those particular activities, will not find buyers, except at uneconomic prices. Experiences of this sort will give, in addition to uneconomic prices, a wrong impression in Great Britain of the value and usefulness of our she-stock, a condition that will cost the producers and shippers considerable money, and one that will be difficult to correct. The same thing applies to our steers going into new areas.

"Such a result, if it were possible to forestall, should not be risked or permitted. Even extreme precautions to safeguard the new trade, and the new opportunity, could be justified. Furthermore, I misjudge the trade here if they would not support concentrated action, at the outset, to attain this desirable objective.

"For the general guidance of shippers who are considering the possibilities of serving the dairy industry with either heifers or springer cows, freshening three or four weeks after landing, the great majority of the dairy farmers prefer a good size animal, which, of course, should possess milking qualities and conformation. The breeds most favored are cross Shorthorns or crosses out of Holstein and Ayrshire by a Shorthorn bull. Pure bred Ayrshires or Holsteins are not favoured unless they are of the top class. The dairy Shorthorn type and size is what dairymen have in mind.

"One dealer suggests that: 'Shippers should give the fullest information as to probable dates of calving; what kind of sire produces the calf; and what age the cow is—whether first, second or third calf. We would recommend cows about four to five years old, carrying second or third calf. First calf cows would not sell as well, owing to the prospect of smaller milk volume during first calf period.'

"The first choice in Scotland, for heifers for best breeding purposes is well bred Angus or their crosses. Shorthorns are second. Herefords are not popular. In England, the Hereford takes a better place.

"Realizing and sustaining profitable results in building our cattle business will depend very largely upon the direction and conduct of the initial efforts in the new field of markets."

Common sense should convince us that the points made in the above paragraphs are well taken, and that all concerned would do well to exercise every reasonable precaution in respect to volume and quality of cattle exported to the United Kingdom. If, however, further proof is necessary, nothing could be more appropriate than the following statement from a letter dated February 17th from the Animal Products Trade Commissioner in London to the Dominion Live Stock Branch, Ottawa, in respect to a recent shipment sold at Birkenhead.

"The cows, whether or not they were intended for slaughter or milking, were unsuitable for either purpose. None of the buyers was interested to the extent of tendering a bid. Usually what happens with the sale of such animals is that they are left with the consignee until he commences to feel that the costs to the shipper for holding the cattle are accumulating out of proportion to the chances of getting a satisfactory price; consequently, in his interests, the sale is concluded mostly at the buyer's figure, and for the very good reason that, although they are unsuitable for the meat trade there is, nevertheless, no alternative outlet."

Adding conviction to conviction, we can do nothing better, in concluding this statement, than quote from a letter received from one who has, for more than a quarter of a century, been active in the United Kingdom market.

"You may advise any inquirers that rough cattle are not wanted, and it would be very foolish to put the cost of shipping on common cattle. It costs just as much to ship and sell a bad one as a good one. England wants only well bred cattle in good condition."

Soap should never be used on white silk. It should be dissolved in water before laundering is begun.

Lack Of Phosphorus Causes Tooth Decay

According To Results Of Experiments By Dr. Agnew

Tooth decay is primarily due to lack of phosphorus and Vitamin "D" in the diet, according to the results of research made by Dr. R. Gordon Agnew of the West China Union University. Working with hundreds of laboratory animals, Dr. Agnew was able to produce tooth decay in practically all the cases by depriving them of these two food elements.

Eating sugar, candy, and other sweets, it was further indicated by these test diets, has no effect in itself in causing tooth decay, except that by satisfying the appetite too quickly it tends to keep down the intake of the foods which contain the elements which do make for sound tooth structure.

Dr. Agnew says that among the Tibetan tribes in particular, where tooth decay is especially infrequent while their diet is highly restricted, the eating of whole corn, an important article of their daily food, supplies them with adequate phosphorus while their life of door life in the sunshine assures them of plenty of Vitamin "D."

Value Of Life Insurance

Interesting Statement Made By Hon. Charles A. Dunning

Hon. Charles A. Dunning, former Canadian finance minister, made an interesting statement with respect to life insurance in his annual address as president of the Ontario Equitable Life when he said: "Life insurance as an institution is at once the greatest debtor and the greatest creditor in Canada; the greatest Canadian debt, or because its contracts to pay are larger in volume than any other in our national structure; the greatest Canadian creditor because it has accumulated in small amounts with respect to the five million lives insured over two and one-quarter billion dollars, which it has loaned to governments, municipalities, school districts, railways, utilities, industries, its own policyholders, and also on mortgage."—Toronto Star Weekly.

Northwest Company Operates Furthest North Petroleum Well In The Great Bear Lake District

Learning To Fly

Mexican Tree Frog Can Drop Slowly From Great Heights

A Mexican tree frog that appears to be learning to fly is described by Dr. Remington Kellogg, of the United States National Museum. This frog, he says, has elongated hind legs well adapted to jumping, and has been known to leap and alight without injury a height of 140 feet. Dr. Kellogg has conducted a number of experiments to test its powers of flight. When he dropped one from a high water tower he said it immediately spread out its limbs and sailed down slowly at an angle, landing uninjured a few feet away from the base of the tower. There appeared to be no further acceleration after the frog had fallen about twelve feet, he said. At other times, Dr. Kellogg has tried throwing these frogs into the air. Each time he did so, he said, they always managed by violent struggling to get into a balanced position and glide to the ground uninjured.

Sometimes what seems a prosaic business transaction has behind it a world of romance and high adventure. Such was the case when the Department of the Interior, early in 1933, received from the Northwest Company, Limited, a subsidiary of Imperial Oil Limited, a cheque for the amount of the first royalty payable to the Government on the production of the Company's petroleum well near Norman in the Northwest Territories, nine hundred odd miles, as the Canadian geese flies, north of Edmonton. That slip of paper contained only ten or a dozen words, but how much of faith, industry and work accomplished it revealed.

In 1921 the Northwest Company struck a flow of petroleum, reputed at that time to be about at the rate of 100 barrels per day, in what is commonly called the Norman well, situated on the bank of the Mackenzie fifty-three miles below Norman. The well was completed in 1925 and as there was no immediate local use for the petroleum it was capped to prevent waste.

When it became clear that there was oil in commercial quantities half way down the Mackenzie between Great Slave Lake and the Arctic Ocean there was a lot of popular speculation as to what would be done about it. Common comments were that the oil was useless where it was and would never become a commercial proposition. It was held that it would be cut out of the market until the southern wells went dry and even then the cost of freighting it up stream nine hundred miles or one thousand miles to rail head, or pumping it up hill through a pipe line for the same distance, would be prohibitive.

Then came the aeroplane, and inasmuch as from aerial photographs, prospectors and their supplies were taken in from rail head in as many hours as it formerly took weeks, and were moved from location to location with equal speed. Steamboats and tractors, canoes and dogteams were in use, too, but it was the aeroplane which carried the master key to the doors of the North.

The mineral deposits about the east end of Great Bear Lake were discovered, development began, and there was a demand for gasoline and fuel oil. Great Bear Lake empties into the Mackenzie River through Great Bear River, at the mouth of which later Norman is situated. The Norman oil source in 1933 was, therefore, comparatively speaking, next door to its customers, with water transportation (except one portage around a stretch of rapids in the Great Bear River) from the well to the east end of Great Bear Lake. The Northwest Company, which had brought in a small refining plant in 1921, opened this up in the spring of 1932 and supplied gasoline and fuel oil for running motors and Diesel engines in the mining camps. It was upon this production that the royalty was paid, and while the output so far has been relatively small this commercial use of northern oil is both a fulfilment of well grounded predictions of ten years ago and a promise of greater things to come.

Newsboys Are Quick

Can Tell Nationality Of Customers By Their Shoes

Americans occasionally when travelling in England like to be taken for Englishmen. One of this group, a Cleveland traveller, was in London, where he got into a complete English outfit—suit, hat, linen, gloves, overcoat and cane.

Dressed in the outfit, he walked out to the steps of his hotel and stood there a moment contemplating the weather. Just then a newsboy, almost a black swan, came dawdling along and him crying:

"New York Herald—here you are sir!"

It was a vendor of foreign newspapers in Paris who told the secret of his skill in spotting the nationality of prospective customers. "I look at their shoes," said he.

Staked Gold Claim

Woman Prospector Held Old-Time Miners Into Cariboo Country.

Some of the old-time prospectors in the Cariboo gold country are losing out to newcomers in staking claims this winter, but not Mrs. Gertrude Murphy.

Mrs. Murphy has been prospecting in the Cariboo off and on for many years. Usually she spends the winter in California, but she heard of the early rush to the Cariboo this season and hurried north. She hiked in over the frozen wilderness on snowshoes and staked several promising claims on the headwaters of Lightning Creek several days before the vanguard of the newcomers arrived.

The grizzled old men who have habitually staked claims every spring in the Cariboo have not fared so well. By the time they got out on the trail they were too late.

In addition to Williams Creek, where gold was first discovered more than 60 years ago to start one of the most colorful stampedes in the mining history of the continent, several other creeks have now been thoroughly staked, including Lightning, Antler and Lover's Leap below Windham. All through the old town of Barkerville men have filed their claims.

Explanations and Comments

A Picture Of A Drunkard, Proverbs 23:29.—By a series of questions the writer of these verses gives us a vivid picture of a drunkard. "Who hath Oh! Who hath Alas!" the Hebrew literally reads, "The words translated 'woe' and 'sorrow' are interjections, not nouns. Woe and sorrow come to every one sooner or later, but the drunkard creates them for himself. 'Who hath contentions? Who hath complaining?' Drunkenness embroils men in quarrels and strife. 'Who hath wounds without cause?' Drunken men come to blows over nothing, without knowing why or wherefore. 'Who hath redness of eyes?' Bleared eyes are one of the conspicuous signs of the drunkard. The speaker then answers his own questions: 'They that tarry long at the wine; they that go to seek out mixed wine. By mixed wine may be meant wine mixed with spices or with opiates. 'There is a touch of sarcasm in this answer; the word elsewhere used of intelligent, search after knowledge is here used, as if ironically, of the investigations of connoisseurs, in wine, meeting to test its quality," says Dr. Plummer.

The poem closes with a soliloquy of a drunkard who is past reformation, he "will seek it yet again." "Ah, that men should put an enemy in their mouths to steal away their brains! That we should feed with joy, pleasure, revel, and applause, transform ourselves into beasts!"—Shakespeare.

The Appearance and Effect of Wine, Proverbs 23:31, 32.—The writer now counsels everyone to keep away from temptation. "Look not upon the wine when it is red." "Critics judge of wine, among other indications, by the color of it: some wine, they say, looks so well that it even says, 'Come and drink me'."—Matthew Henry.

"When it sparketh in the cup; it says, 'Eye, to the cup, that is when it is full of life.' 'Joy.' Nor when it is 'goeth down smoothly'; see the Song of Solomon, 7:9. The wine which fascinates like a serpent is also as poisonous as a serpent—at the last it biteth like a serpent, and stingeth like an adder."

"Not only the sting of the serpent, but the subtlety of the serpent is in wine. The deception lies in the fact that the habit of drinking will be confirmed before you know the it is enslaving you. Every glass of liquor increases the desire for another glass."

"Take heed of the bait, for fear of the hook."

CORRESPONDENCE.

MORE ABOUT THE BURNELL PLAN

To the Editor:—I have received a number of requests to publish, and press my views in respect to the Burnell Plan, which I have been studying for some months. I am of the opinion that this plan can revive business activity in Western Canada, and that there can be no revival of business activity unless and until our agricultural income is revived. A greater purchasing power among farmers is the supreme need at this time.

The Burnell Plan, a strictly controlled inflationary device, offers a means of putting a greatly increased purchasing power to work immediately. It points out a simple and practical way for business people and farmers to join forces for their mutual benefit.

The plan has received the hearty endorsement of a number of leading economists, bankers, officials, and business executives in Winnipeg and other western cities. It is being closely studied by boards of trade, service clubs, retail merchants' associations, and other bodies directly interested in the revival of business. Interest in the plan centres chiefly around the fact that it indicates an immediate speeding up of business activity by increasing the velocity of retail and wholesale commodity turnover and avoids most of the objections to the plan before it is introduced to the general public and the farming community.

In brief the plan is as follows: A Collective Purchasing Association is formed, having for its Board of directors a group of men of good standing in the business world and whose names automatically inspire public confidence. Any farmer may become a member of the association upon payment of a fee of one dollar.

The association is represented by an agent at every country point. Negotiations are in progress with a view to having the branches of the "Produce Bonds" or vouchers and special checks issued to the agents.

When a farmer sells produce (say load of oats worth $50.00) he receives a cheque cash ticket from the buyer. Ordinarily he would do $50.00 worth of business with this cheque cash ticket. The Burnell Plan endorses his cash ticket or cheque to the association, and receiving a cheque cash ticket in return.

Each cash ticket has a face value of double amount, namely $100.00. He affixes a 40 cent stamp, which he has purchased from the association, and tenders the voucher to a local merchant for $100.00 worth of goods. The merchant affixes a 40 cent stamp, which he has purchased from the association, and passes the document on for $100.00 worth of goods or services.

The voucher passes through four hands in this manner, each affixing a 40 cent stamp. Each holder subsequent to the farmer pays $100.00 worth of goods or services and, after contributing his 40 cents, receives $10.00 in value. Thus every one has done $100.00 worth of business instead of $50.00 worth, and has effected a discount of 4 per cent. for the opportunity.

When the fourth holder has added his stamp he takes the voucher to the nearest association agent and redeems it for its face value of $100.00 cash. To redeem the voucher the association has on hand the original $50.00 deposited by the farmer at the outset, plus $5.00 which has been paid in by the purchasers of stamps and the balance is added to the fund. Thus there is an hand $100.00 to pay to the 14th holder and a surplus of 60 cents to cover operating expenses and to build up a reserve. As soon as the voucher is redeemed it is cancelled and the retired circulation is destroyed.

Certain natural objections to the plan are evident. For instance, it is said that the whole plan is based upon a sales-tax, and that business cannot stand it. The answer to this argument is easy. Admitting that the 4 per cent. discount accepted by the holder of the voucher is in the nature of a sales-tax, it is readily seen that this is the only tax in existence which has the direct effect of stimulating business activity. Whereas an ordinary sales-tax represents a slice of your profit taken by the Government because you have done a stroke of business, the tax involved here is a portion of your profit which you voluntarily contribute directly to your own community for the purpose of speeding up business. Business men realize that taxation is the order of the day. It is inevitable. By accepting the voluntary taxation involved in the Burnell Plan you prevent compulsory taxation of a more unpleasant type.

Another objection to the plan is summed up in the words, "I don't like scrip schemes." Here again, it is a matter of facing what is almost inevitable. Whether you like it or not,

Act at once!
Acne is eliminated
poisoning your blood.
Take Eno's

TAKE ENO'S FRUIT SALT

scrip is rapidly finding its way into the commercial life of western Canada, and will probably be adopted in many communities during the coming year. Some scrip schemes have more objectionable features than others. Great advantage will come if, instead of encouraging the mushroom growth of a score of unrelated scrip issues, we firmly establish one plan which is economically sound and applicable to the whole West.

Some critics have suggested that inherent danger in the Burnell Plan lies in the possibility of vouchers getting "stuck halfway," and not completing the full round of 14 transactions. The likelihood of this occurring is so slight as to be practically negligible. As each voucher travels from the farmer to the ultimate holder there is actual cash behind it. The cash backing is never less than 54 per cent. of the face value of the voucher as people use the vouchers. Value increases with use, and every voucher is 100 per cent. redeemable in cash. No wise business man will refuse to accept the vouchers if the integrity of the issuing organization is firmly established. If he refuses to accept the vouchers he simply drives business across the farmer to the merchant who will accept them.

The sponsors of this plan fully realize the importance of public confidence. They are setting up a Board of Directors comprised of business men whose names are well known to the community. It is their duty to automatically establish its integrity and inspire the necessary confidence.

The plan has been studied by professional business men, economists and financiers. Weaknesses have been checked and remedied. It has now reached a stage where it has received the endorsement and backing of many of the most level-headed leaders in the West.

This plan will give an important stimulus to business, not in the demands made at the tail-end, but right at the beginning where it is most needed and where its effects will be shared by everyone in the community. It will solve the basic problem of diminished farmer purchasing power. It will enable the farmer to buy with many goods, to pay twice as many bills, as he could otherwise do. It will enable merchants to do business on a cash basis, at ordinary price-levels. It will permit multiplying to achieve double success in tax collections. It will enable wholesalers to get rid of more supplies. It will speed up the collection of tax money and doctor-bills and dent-bills. It will mean that mortgage companies will be able to clean up their funds more rapidly. It will speed up business all along the line and create a new spirit of industry, energy and enterprise in Western Canada.

To accomplish this end the plan demands something from the public. It demands confidence and enthusiasm and interest and support. It does not pretend to give something for nothing. But it does, definitely and apically, offer an appreciable reward to the community which is willing to help itself to the extent of contributing a portion of its normal profits for the sake of getting out of the awful hole of depression and stagnation.

Yours very truly,

W. A. Landreth.

THE CANADA STARCH CO. LIMITED, MONTREAL

A MEASURE TO REPEAL THE BAN ON SWEEPSTAKES

Ottawa, Ont.—Sweepstakes for hospital and charitable purposes would be legalized in Canada if a bill introduced in the senate by Senator A. D. MacRae, of Vancouver, becomes law. It is the Vancouver senator's second attempt to repeal Canada's ban on this type of large scale gambling. He introduced a similar bill last year, but failed to get it through.

Public feeling was now in favor of regularized sweepstakes, Senator MacRae said. In Vancouver 73 per cent. of the voters at a plebiscite had approved government controlled sweepstakes. The British Columbia Hospital Association had voted in favor of them and the Union of British Columbia Municipalities had endorsed the idea.

The object of the bill is to authorize the provinces to permit the conduct of sweepstakes in their territories, not by any group of citizens, but only by a committee authorized by the attorney-general, who would direct the scheme. The money would be devoted to the welfare of the sick, the destitute and the maimed.

The bill expressly forbids the advertising of a sweepstake outside the province in which it is being conducted and the appointment of agents for the sale of tickets outside the province.

Senator MacRae said in 1931, the Irish hospitals received from the three sweepstakes, more than £2,000,000. In 1932, according to a cable he received recently from Ireland three sweepstakes had gross receipts of £11,000,000. They gave away in prizes £7,500,000 and the expenses were £1,000,000.

As to the moral question involved, the churches in Ireland had voiced no disapproval of the holding of sweepstakes. After all church bazaars were the same thing on a small scale.

Senator MacRae outlined the serious situation of the hospitals and other charitable institutions in Canada. The Vancouver hospital for instance, owed $270,000 to the bank, and had no money to pay it. Other institutions were in like predicament. He closed with an urgent plea for the passage of his bill.

May Reduce Number Of Police Magistrates

Alberta Has Lowered Appropriation As a Matter Of Economy

Edmonton, Alberta.—Estimates introduced in the Alberta legislature for the attorney-general's department show a reduction of $13,758 compared to last year's figure and it is understood a reduction in the number of police magistrates in the province is planned by the government.

The appropriation for police magistrates dropped from $69,205 to $52,180. Attorney-General J. F. Lynn said it might be necessary to "place some magistrates" on a fee basis, or there may be a reduction in the number employed.

Former Kaiser May Lose Money As Result Of U.S. Situation

London, Eng.—The former German Kaiser probably will be obliged to cut his household expenses as a result of the financial situation in the United States. The London Daily Mail's Doorn correspondent reported. Wilhelm also was said by the reporter to be anxiously watching fluctuations of the Dutch florin, a fall in which would make him comparatively poor.

To Help British Farmers

London, Eng.—Major Walter Elliott, Minister of Agriculture, introduced in the House of Commons a bill designed to re-organize British agriculture and bring prices of British farm products to a remunerative level. It would empower the government to protect organized markets by regulation of imports through quotas or other means from any food of overseas imports.

Report Not Confirmed

Ex-Kaiser May Have Abandoned Claim To German Throne

London, Eng.—Any prospects of former Kaiser Wilhelm II seeking to regain the throne of Imperial Germany as a result of recent events there is stated to have vanished through the former sovereign's own act.

If the London Daily Mail's correspondent at Doorn, Holland, is accurately informed, Wilhelm II has completely and voluntarily abandoned the aim with which he has often been credited—of again wielding power over his own people.

Instead he is reported seeking permission to spend his declining years in the privacy of his castle at Homburg Vor Der Höhe, the famous mineral spring resort in Hesse-Nassau. He was 74 years old in January.

Any anxiety the ex-kaiser may have felt concerning the attitude of his sons toward his abandonment of claims to the throne were reportedly removed by a kind of confirmatory document of abdication. At a recent family council in Doorn, the sons were reported to have turned over all their "rights" to the throne to the ex-crown prince for his disposal.

Approves Financial Move

London Daily Mail Thinks Canada's Intent Is "Wise Step"

London, Eng.—The Daily Mail, Conservative organ, described the alleged intention of the Canadian government to ask parliament for extraordinary powers in the matters of finance as a "very wise and timely step."

"There are many factors," it continued, "which must operate strongly in Canada's favor. Her banking system is free from most of the weaknesses which brought difficulties elsewhere. She has not a multitude of small mutually competitive banks but a close co-operation between 11 large banks under the Bankers' Association."

The Daily Mail refers to the report the government would ask parliament to invest it with all the powers conveyed under the "peace order and good government" clause of war-time legislation. This clause would give the government power to initiate practically any measure thought necessary to the welfare and stability of the Dominion.

Motion Picture Producers Feel Financial Pinch

Hollywood, Cal.—Cessation of all activities at all motion picture studios in Hollywood was ordered early today by the Association of Motion Picture Producers unless drastic cuts in salaries and wages for an eight-week period, due to the banking situation, were taken by all employees and artists.

For salaries more than $50 weekly, a cut of 50 per cent. for the eight-week period would be made with a minimum salary of $37.50 established. Those earning less than $50 weekly would take a 25 per cent. cut with a minimum of $15 a week. The cuts would be retroactive starting March 6.

Chicago Citizens Pay Respects To Slain Mayor

Chicago.—The body of Mayor Anton Cermak lay in the darkened parlor of his home as Chicagoans went about their affairs at a slower tempo after recording an impressive tribute to the man who rose from immigrant to mayor.

But one floral piece adorned the casket—a spray of red sent by President and Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt. The president, for whom the bullet that brought death to Chicago's chief executive was intended, was represented by a military aide, Lieut.-Col. Campbell B. Hodges.

From the time the train bearing the funeral cortege arrived until the casket disappeared behind the portals of the Cermak home, the citizenry observed a minute calm. The motorcade of official automobiles that followed the hearse through the Loop district, past Mayor Cermak's workshop—the city hall—and to his home on the northwest side, numbered almost 100.

A white feather proffered by a girl student was enthusiastically accepted by young men attending. The League of Nations was termed "half-baked idealism" and a "ghastly failure." Pacifism was called "a damnable sin" by a co-ed.

MARSHAL CHANG RESIGNS HIS POST AS COMMANDER

Peiping, China.—Thirty-five-year-old Marshal Chang Hsiao-Liang, who resigned as commander-in-chief of the Chinese armies operating against the Japanese in the north, explained to the government he considered himself unfit to command.

His resignation climaxed a long period of criticism of his administration of the Chinese defence forces which, since September, 1931, have been almost steadily withdrawing before the Japanese. In a telegram to the Nanking government the young marshal said:

"After the loss of the three eastern provinces (comprising Manchuria), I tried my best to remedy my fault but the fall of Jehol convinced me I am unfit to keep command."

Chang succeeded his father, the late Marshal Chang Tso-Lin, as war lord of Manchuria in 1928.

Peiping, China.—The arrest and execution by the Chinese of General Tang Yu-Lin, who governed the province of Jehol until that territory was taken over by the Japanese, was reported here today.

A reliable source said General Tang, had been seized at Hsiao-Engkow, a pass through the Great Wall. Troops of Marshal Chang Hsiao-Liang, who has just resigned as the principal North China military commander, made the arrest, it was said.

Chevrolet Standard Six

Announcement Story.

Offering the lowest priced, full size, six cylinder enclosed models with the lowest operating costs in the history of the industry, General Motors on Monday announced a new Standard Chevrolet built especially for business and for that group of private owners who want a car without the de luxe features and extra long wheelbase of the present Chevrolet Master Six.

Ideal for severe utility use, the new car will strengthen Chevrolet's position in the industry by opening up the market represented by people who in their car purchases must of necessity give consideration first to cost and second to style and size.

But while these considerations of initial and operating costs have been the dominating factors in the production of the new car, there has been no sacrifice of essentials and in all save wheelbase and certain refinements, Chevrolet Standard is twin to Chevrolet Master.

It has the same windstream styling with skirted fenders. The 3 body styles in the line—5 passenger coach, 4 passenger coupe with rumble seat, and "2 passenger coupe—all have body by Fisher, and all have the new Fisher no draft ventilation.

Briefly, the new car offers 107" wheel base, 60 h.p. engine, new octane selector, the Chevrolet developed stabilised front and mounting, valanced fenders, and silent second, as well as many features incorporated in the larger companion car.

The chassis is proportioned to afford unusually large body space for passenger comfort.

The 6 cylinder, rubber mounted 60 h.p. valve in head engine is of the same basic design as the Chevrolet Six first introduced in 1928. Both front and rear brakes are fully enclosed, of the articulated shoe type similar to those used on the Master Model.

Self adjusting shackles so successfully used by Chevrolet for the past 5 years are standard; as are 4 Delco-Lovejoy shock absorbers of latest design.

Ignition and all locks are operated by one key. The twinbeam headlamp design closely follows that of the Master model, and the instrument panel is of the aviation type. Controls consist of light, hand throttle and carburetor choke buttons on instrument panel and foot operated starter, with dimmer switch and treadle-type accelerator.

Five wire wheels and rear tire carrier are standard with all 3 models. Driver's seat is adjustable and the sun shade is supported at both ends. Window glass frame is narrow chrome bead and all body hardware is chrome plated. Various interior body fittings are standard with the 3 models.

Restrict the Use of Credit.

The people in several of the States of the Republic across the border will for a time try the experiment of getting along without banks. This means getting along without bank credits, and also without the money the people have saved and deposited in the banks. A carefully prepared account of how business is carried on when banks are closed would throw some light on the question of how much business can be done with a relatively small amount of money that is kept in rapid circulation.

When the banks close the community has to get along with what money the residents happened to have on hand at the time. The per centage to which trade falls off when there is only this fraction of the money supply available for use would be illuminating. To what extent curtailment of the supply is offset by speeding up of circulation is a thing it would be useful to know.

The survey would also indicate to what degree it might be practicable to restore business to a cash basis and restrict the use of credit. The bulk of the business done in Canada and the U.S. is done with bank credits, not cash. The curtailment of these credits was a factor in bringing on the present deflation. If credits were permanently restricted, it is possible the conditions which bring about a period of deflation would be prevented.

In his cabin, with the steamer throbbing on toward Steel-End, Alan wondered what Joyce's reaction would be if he should go to her and frankly tell her about that tragic incident in his life which had brought about his engagement to Elizabeth. Joyce would understand his motive. She would no longer think he'd acted of his own free will. Perhaps if she knew this truth, she might allow him to resume their old intimacy. . . . But Elizabeth, what of her? She was waiting, waiting there at Edgeland, for him to marry her. In honor and faith he could not break away now. That secret and powerful circumstance still bound him and would bind him to her all his life.

A half-mile up in the fleecy clouds up above the pretty city of Edmonton, Mr. "Buzard" Featherfoot was dropping out toy parachutes carrying free cakes and printed matter of the E-Z Klean Soap and Washing Powder Company, Ltd.

He was tired, stiff, hungry and indescribably bored.

During the late war Buzard had knocked an assorted number of Fokkers, Taubers and Albatrosses out of the air; had come down himself a couple of times rather precipitately; and once, commanding a five-plane circus, hand brought down a Super-Zeppelin in the Channel after it had dropped its "eggs" in cabbage patches around London.

Since his return to Canada, Buzard had taken a fling at aerial map-making in British Columbia; had worked a season with the Manitoba Fire Prevention as a "smoke hawk"; had bombed paper-mache French chateaux down amid the flowers and climate of Los Angeles.

Recently, tired of working for other folk, he had raked together some money and bought a machine of his own, which was now flying.

It was a queer nameless contraption, this monoplane of his—an assemblage of piano wire, canvas, spruce and iron, held together by luck and Buzard's lizardry at flying. It had originally been a White Speedair with "Jenny" engine, but he had re-doped the fabric and put in a second-hand Whirlwind and equipped it with third-hand under-gear of the float-wheel type, and overhauled it generally till little of the original machine remained. Only his warm friendship with the aviation inspector kept it from being junked. But somehow—and this is the rock-bottom test of any flying machine—it had never yet come down before Buzard wanted it to. And it did have speed; anything lacking speed would never have satisfied him. Such as it was, it was his very own; and no mother was ever prouder of a cross-eyed snuggle-toothed child than Buzard was of his White Speedair.

He was, however, ambitious to get a big new De Havilland, so that he could safely take up a girl down in Kamloops and carry her along with him on his airy path of life. But with no advertising or big company to back him, Buzard had found this free-lance work to be tough sledding. Had found difficulty keeping up repairs on his old machine, let alone getting a new one. Jobs were sheer accidents. Except for the faint possibility of murdering some more grasshoppers over near High Hat, the work he was finishing this noon was the last thing in sight.

As he heaved overboard the last of the E-Z Klean soap and printed matter, and headed back for the landing field, he yawned and swore:

"The devil with this peace-time stuff; Oh, Lord, I wish they'd bring on another unpleasantness."

It was in some such frame of mind, as he landed and crawled out of the cockpit, that he saw a tall, thin, individual, in lace boots, khaki trousers, jacket and gray hat, get out of a waiting taxi and saunter toward him.

The stranger, as he came up, looked at the machine with that peculiar respectful gaze of a person who has never flown in one.

Buzard thought, "If that fellow asks me to take him for a joy ride, I'll murder him with a monkey-wrench!" A moment later, as he got a closer look at that hard purposive face, he decided: "No, he's not that kind. Smokes like a chimney, but maybe wants me to fly him out to his limit. Thirty-dollar job—dam-will!"

The stranger came on. "Hello," Buzard answered tartly. "Hello yourself."

The stranger paid no attention to the brusque reply. Instead he reached out his hand. It was a good-looking hand, big, calloused, fingers lace from bars.

"Name's Baker," he introduced himself. "Alan Baker."

Buzard partly thawed. This fellow Baker looked to be somebody. His slow smile was mighty fetching; his clear intelligent eyes were kindly, warm, friendly.

"Glad to know you, Baker. Mine's Featherfoot—James Arbuthnot Featherfoot."

"Good gracious! All that? But what do people call you?"

They both grinned. "They call me 'Buzard.' Wear red helmet; never stop my wings."

"'Buzard'—that's more like. I saw you sailing around up there when I got off the train. Made inquiries and hustled out here to the field. Was on my way down to Winnipeg. Expected I'd have to go down there, or maybe to Calgary, to find a machine and a pilot."

"Uh-uh."

Baker jerked his thumb at the plane. "Whose is that?"

"Looking at you. Belongs to me and myself. Unlimited. Bought it with cigarette coupons."

Baker's face brightened a little, and now Buzard noticed that this hard-bitten man was deeply worried but was hiding his trouble and talking with a jest on his lips.

"So the machine belongs to you. Glad to hear that. Working on your own hook, I suppose? That's still better. Say, Featherfoot, how long are you booked up flying?"

Buzard had found it good policy to lie. If he made out there was a crushing demand for his services, it impressed people and got him jobs—some of them.

"Oh, about two months," he said carelessly. "All depends on how much flying weather I get."

Baker cracked a blade of grass and chewed it meditatively. Finally he asked: "Say, Featherfoot, you couldn't shake free for a couple or three weeks, could you? Get sick, or have to get married, or something like that?"

Buzard took thought as he batted an eye. A couple or three weeks. . . . Must be a good-sized job. . . . might pay well. . . . Oh—a—the pay! Always thinking of pay. Getting commercial. . . .

"I might," he answered. "Depends. What kind of flying do you want me to do? What for a job is it?"

"That would take me some time to explain. I wouldn't want any man to tackle it without him understanding the whole thing, or then he might feel I'd dragged him into trouble."

Something in Baker's tone made Buzard look at him sharply. "Nothing illeg—crook—out of the ordinary, is it?"

"It's all three, and then some." Buzard bit his cigarette. "And then some!" My eyes! Where's your declaring war on?"

"If you want to know who I am, I was in the Mounted. The O.C. here at Edmonton can tell you about me. And I can give you other references."

"You were in the Mounted?" Buzard frowned thoughtfully. "Baker—the Mounted. . . . Say, haven't I heard or read somewhere. . . . Are you that Sergeant Baker down north near the Arctic?"

Alan nodded.

"My eyes! I read about some of your doings. You're on a detective trick or something like that, Baker?"

With expert judgment Alan had been sizing up his new acquaintance, from his brick-red helmet, down across his oil-spattered jumpers, to his "side-wind" shoes. He read the stardew in this Featherfoot. He was a man after Alan's own heart. And he had a machine of his own! If only he'd go, it would save precious days looking for a plane and pilot.

Alan said: "My story is a long one. You look as hungry as I feel. . . ."

"I am, Baker. Let's go out and then talk."

Alan helped him pull a canvas over the machine. Together they stepped over to the taxi. As they rambled down town they swapped war yarns, discussed several mutual acquaintances and came down to "Alan" and "Buzard."

At the Chateau MacDonald Alan sent a telegram to Colonel Steele in Victoria. He wrote it swiftly, not daring to think twice of the fatal step.

"Am out of Mounted accepting your fine offer will you wire me five hundred as salary advance would be mighty grateful letter following with details."

"ALAN BAKER:"

He and Buzard sat dinner; and then for a solid hour Alan talked.

He told of the Midnight Sun robbery, of the chase, fight, escape, of Dave MacMillan's trouble; of his resolve to help Joyce; of Joyce going bravely back to the lonely trading station; of his run-in with Haskell, his getting busted, his buying out of service, his thousand-mile trip to Edmonton.

"But just where do the old crate and me come in at?" Buzard asked. To Be Continued.)

Tested His Invention—

To prove that his unspinnable glass would not break, an inventor in Berlin, Germany, recently placed it in the eye-socket of a gas mask he wore, and pounded the glass with a hammer.

FOR ANY PAIN

Have you ever found any quicker relief than this?

Anyone can take Aspirin. For doctors have declared these tablets perfectly safe.

And there is no quicker form of relief for any pain.

It is well to remember these things when anyone tries to persuade you to try anything in place of these tablets.

Aspirin may be taken as often as there is any need of its comfort: to stop a headache, throw off a cold, drive away the pains from neuralgia, neurtis, rheumatism, lumbago, etc.

Whenever you take Aspirin you know you are going to get immediate results—and you know there will be no ill effects. You know what you are taking.

Why take chances on some form of relief which may not be as safe? The new reduced price on bottles of 100 tablets has removed the last reason for ever experimenting with any substitute for Aspirin.

Aspirin is a trade-mark registered in Canada

Horses Wanted.

Members of the Tally-ho club had a charming outing on Sunday afternoon, enjoying a sleighing party and visiting friends in the outlying districts. The team experienced difficulty in negotiating some of the snow drifts, and the horse chauffeur decided to have four or five teams on the sleigh at next Sunday afternoon's outing. The party will congregate at 2.30 at the Bank Corner. Ladies please bring a cake; gents please bring a horse.

News of Rosenthal.

Mr A Shadack has returned to his home at Tomahawk, after a fortnight's visit in the Rosenthal district with his daughters, Mrs Carl Hoffman and Mrs Wm Kotscherofsky. Mr Ed Barth has just finished repairing the William Barth residence, which had recently been damaged by fire in the inside.

It'll be a long time before we'll be able to don bathing suits, as it is reported that the ice on Cottage Lake is 3 ft. thick. Evidently, this is one thing J. A. can't control.

Mrs Peter Kulak was operated on at the Misericordia Tuesday, for goitre; and is progressing as well as could be expected.

R. C. Howat is Inga's Reeve

On Monday last, the 18th, the six newly-elected Councillors of Inga Municipality met, when Mr R C Howat was elected Reeve; Mr Joe Best was appointed Municipal secretary, from about four score applicants—the appointment to be subject to the approval of Hon R G Reid, the Minister of Municipal Affairs. Some discussion took place on the matter of removing the Secretary's office to a point further west in Inga Municipality.

Mr J Renshaw was present during the opening proceedings.

Death of John R. Umbach.

The funeral takes place today (Thursday) of Mr John R Umbach, an oldtime resident of Edmonton, who had passed away on Saturday, March 11th, in his 74th year. Deceased was a brother to Mr Israel Umbach, of Stony Plain. Mr Umbach and family were in attendance at the funeral obsequies.

Brightbank Items.

Mr John Kyle, who was taken ill a short time ago, has made a good recovery.

Steady progress is being made in the construction of the new Community hall.

We hear that some big bets were made on the result of the recent election—Big Jim wagered a team of horses against a neighbor's Ayrshire bull.

All the prosperous farmers of the district, and a few of the others, are getting ready for the spring work. Indications show that there will be a record area sown to grain hereabouts this season—let the price be what it may, at threshing.

A group of good Liberals were disappointed when they were unable to be present in Stony Plain when Mr W R Howson made his notable address.

Accident Near a School.

On Monday March 6th an accident occurred while a lady was driving her kinder in the Cottage Lake district, to a school (forced to do so because her husband and hired man were too busy) a tug got undone which she did not notice, the sleigh tongue slipped out of the neck yoke; the horses run off, upset the sleigh and threw the lady in the snow; the doubletree kingpin came out, and the horses then ran away, dragging the doubletrees.

A farmer living nearby then caught the horses, went back to help the lady, who came walking up. It was found she had sustained a fractured arm and that the skin had been peeled off her nose. More help came, but, alas! the rescuers never got thanked for their trouble. The kinder are now being hauled to school regularly every day. Feed your horses less oats and they will not run away.

LATER—It was found that the captain of the rescue party had hurt his back so badly that he was confined to his room for four days, and he's now wondering whose going to pay the bill of his medical attendant.

Hockey fans are realising they won't see many more games this season on local ice.

Brightbank News

Quite a number from this district took in the whist drive and dance at Hansen's Corners Friday Evg. March 10. Sleighing parties were organized—John Kyle brought in the biggest load and won a prize.

Messrs J Young and H Summerfield made a fishing trip to Wabamun Lake recently and had rather good luck fishing thru the ice. One jackfish weighed 13 pounds and none were less than six pounds. The best bait was herring heads.

Miss Teena McKay was a week end visitor with Miss Susan Kyle.

The crow seen by a Hansen Corners farmer quite a while ago was seen by a Brightbank farmer the other day, wearing a pair of skis.

Holborn Happenings.

The Holborn Juniors held their Social meeting on Sat. the 11th. Quite a crowd attended, despite the night before. Not very much business was carried out, but a splendid evening was had after.

The surprise party given on Mr Arthur Propp on the 10th was a success. Mr Propp who was gotten to the Hall thru a subterfuge, was thoroly surprised to hear the hearty shout as he entered the door, and to find he was the one it was meant for.

On March 5 Holborn puck-chasers met the team from Hansen Corners in a hot game on the Washburn rink. The Holborn boys won by a score of 3-0. The boys from the Corners fought gallantly over the puck—and also over their opponents' needs—but to no avail; their shots were ward off by Holborn's tiptop goalie, Ted Allen.

The dance and pie social given by the Athletics on March 3rd was much better than expected. Despite the weather, a fair-sized crowd attended. The pies sold good—some going as high as 75c and $1. There was keen competition for some of the pastries.

Mr Ainer Anderson has rented his second farm again, and the new tenants moved in last week—H.J.R.
